Stephen Wouch, CPA, CFF the founder and managing partner of Wouch, Maloney & Co., has been providing tax and accounting services to individual and business clients for over thirty years. While highly skilled in the fields of tax and accounting, particularly as they relate to the construction industry, his greatest interest is in getting to know his clients and in helping to bring success to the businesses in which they are involved. Mr. Wouch cares about his clients' problems and their concerns become his concerns. He thrives on finding successful solutions to the myriad of challenges which clients have presented to him. Staying abreast of the latest law and accounting trends enables Mr. Wouch to provide top notch advice to clients. He has become a trusted advisor to his clients in the truest sense of the word.

Mr. Wouch also serves on various committees of the Pennsylvania Institute of Certified Public Accountants and the national tax committee of the Associated Builders and Contractors. Steve continues his proactive approach as he skillfully helps these organizations fulfill their missions. His solid reputation with peers in a variety of fields, including the legal industry, has enhanced his ability to successfully respond to a broad spectrum of issues confronting his clients.

Mr. Wouch has lectured and written on a variety of tax and accounting issues. While serving on the PICPA's Committee on Forensic and Litigation Services, Mr. Wouch co-authored the article, "Relations with the Bar," which appeared in the Pennsylvania CPA Journal. The focus of the article was a review of the practical application of the professional standards on providing litigation services to clients. For the years 2010 and 2011 Mr. Wouch was honored as "SmartCPA" by Philadelphia SmartCEO journal. He is certified to practice in the states of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Florida.
